Foreign Warships Send an Ultimatum to the Rebels.

THE INSURGENTS THREATEN APIA.

The Government Party is Much the Stronger and Will Win in the End—Rebels Move Down the Coast and Burn a Village—Dilatory Conduct of War.

The domestic discussions in Samoa still continue, and the papers down there predict a bloody fight before the trouble is ended. The Government has a great excess of force, and it is sure to win in the end. The captains of the English and German warships have issued the following ultimatum, addressed to the rebel party.

TO THE CHIEFS OF THE WAR PARTY AT ATUA.

We, the commanders of the English and German men-of-war give you notice that, if the chiefs named on the enclosed list come on board the British man-of-war within three (3) hours from the time the boat that brings this reaches the shore, and make submission, you will not be attacked.

You must bring fifty guns and surrender them to the men-of-war.

No boat will be allowed to leave the shore unless it comes direct to one of the men-of-war.

If you do not surrender, you may send your women and children along side the men-of-war during the fighting, and they will be quite safe.

Given under our hands this 24th day of May, 1894.

(Signed.) HERBERT W. S. GIBSON, Captain H. M. S. Curacao.

(Signed.) SCOTLAND, Korvetten Kapitän H. I. G. M. S. Bussard.

Fiamia of Lotofaga.
Paito of Falealili.
Fuimaono Moameto of Falealili.

In accordance with the above ultimatum, the ten chiefs named gave themselves up, and were carried to Apia. Fifty dilapidated muskets were also brought on board and dropped into deep water.

The Samoa Times of the 16th instant gives the following account of the situation as it stands at present:

The so-called civil war still drags its weary length along, being apparently no nearer an end than it was some months ago. At Atua no attempt is being made on either side to bring matters to an issue. In the other direction the Aana rebels have assumed the aggressive and the Government, who have ascribed their delay in making an attack to a desire to surround the rebels, now appear to be practically surrounded by the latter. About 250 of the rebels left Lefaga a few days ago for this side of the island, and several of them were at Vaimoso last Monday. They spoke of burning the village of that name, but allowed themselves to be dissuaded from so doing. They, however, went down the coast without encountering any opposition and burned a portion of the village of Saleimoa. Had the Government party promptly made an attack after the disaster of the 3d, their task would have been easy; now, so much time has been wasted in holding fones, and deciding upon what to do, which the enemy become apprised of and they retreat before an attack can be made. Thus when the Government troops arrived at Samatau the rebels had fled and so, when they were sought at Falealatai it was found that they had retreated to a strong position between that place and Lefaga, which they now occupy. From positive information to hand it appears that their night attack at Fusilolo resulted in loss to them. One man was killed outright and five wounded, two of whom have since died. Their party, however, captured thirty-two rifles, six revolvers and three hundred rounds of ammunition. King Malletoa, who was at Aana, returned to Apia last Wednesday, presumably with a view to holding a conference with the European officials. One thing appears to be certain and that is that neither Aana or Atua will act in any great degree upon the offensive. It is now absolutely certain that a party of the rebels are near Apia. Some temporary houses have been found erected on the hill at the back of Apia, and small gangs of the rebels have been seen at different times. A few days ago a number were seen who were evidently locating the position of the roads around Lotopa, and on Thursday night a party was seen near Mamea's house above Motootua. The alarm was given and some of the Government forces were soon in pursuit, but without success. Yesterday two parties were out from Apia to scour the bush in the near neighborhood in hopes of finding the enemy, but up to the time of our going to press nothing had been heard of their doings.

Chester A. Doyle Accused of "Doing" His Very Good Friend.

HOW A JAPANESE WAS CONVICTED.

The Interpreter Was Assisted by a Japanese, Who Remained in Jail Over Night to Get a Confession—He Was Promised Reward But Did Not Get It

When Chester A. Doyle walked up the Australia's gangplank on last Saturday the band struck up "There are moments when we want to be alone." There is a Japanese in town who wishes that Chester had not departed and that he was here to sing the little song mentioned. According to the Japanese, who is employed as a servant by Dr. Cooper, Doyle gave him what is called the double cross. It seems that the Japanese and Doyle met at Hilo a long time ago and they became bosom friends at once. To seal the friendship the Court interpreter touched his new found acquaintance for $70, which he has not returned to this day, if the Japanese is telling a straight story. But this item is but a small circumstance compared with a later transaction. Readers of the ADVERTISER will remember that correspondents on Maui devoted considerable space to a smart bit of work performed by Doyle. It related to two Japanese who were under arrest at Lahaina for setting fire to a cane field owned by J. M. Horner. The gentleman mentioned was anxious to secure a conviction and offered a reward of $500 to secure that end. Doyle happened to be in Lahaina at the time attending Court and to obtain the reward he remained in jail over night and heard one of the accused men confess that he was guilty. Of course Doyle's evidence alone would not convict the man and he was in a quandary, but circumstances favored him, and in the meantime the incendiary was sent to this city and locked up. Doyle then hunted up his good seventy dollar friend and showed him where he could make $250 just as easy as capitalists tear off coupons. This is where the servant's story commences. Doyle suggested that he should spend a night in a cell at the station with the accused man; this was done and according to Doyle's friend another confession was made by the prisoner. This occurred on the 27th of May, and on the following Monday Doyle, his friend and the prisoner went to Lahaina to attend the court term. The testimony of the first two convicted the Japanese and he was sent to jail. Doyle, according to his own statement, collected the reward and then returned with his friend to town. His partner informed him several times for his half, but Doyle, according to the man's statement, stood him off in his inimitable style. Finally the Japanese was informed that his very good friend was about to leave these sunny shores for a "much needed vacation," as the newspapers put it. On the Thursday previous to Doyle's departure the claimant of one-half of the reward called and was told to come on Sunday and he would receive his money. The Japanese called on Sunday, but Doyle left on the day before and there you are.
